

FIND IT FAST & FREE: INTERNET LEGAL RESEARCH

The Internet's greatest impact on the law may be the way it has changed the way that attorneys and paralegals conduct research. It brings them information they may not have had access to before, as well as new – and faster – ways of accessing familiar information sources.

But in order to reap the benefits of the timesaving, cost-effective advantages of the Internet, legal professionals have to know how to find the information they're looking for—FAST AND FREE!

Nationally recognized Internet trainers and authors of an ABA published book ("The Lawyer's Guide to Fact Finding on the Internet"), CAROLE LEVITT and MARK ROSCH, will teach your attendees practical and effective strategies and skills to conduct systematic and time effective Internet research. (Prior Internet experience is not required, but helpful.)

Topics covered in this full-day course include:

- Effective Use of Search Engines & Directories
- Search Strategies
- Web Browsers & Toolbars
- The Quickest Routes to Free Legal Research
- Where to Find and How to Search Free, Full-Text Case Law Databases
- How To "Shepardize" Online Free: the "Poor Man's" Shepards
- Finding Elusive Government Documents
- Federal Law
- State and Local Law--with a focus on your state's legal and government websites
- Secondary Legal Resources (law review articles, legal news, etc.)
- Practice Materials (court forms, court rules, sample briefs, transactional forms, etc.)
