

Become Your Own Private Eye Thanks to Levitt

By Neil Squillante | Thursday, September 14, 2006

Finally, TechnoLawyer member and law firm trainer extraordinaire Carole Levitt of Internet for Lawyers has published the latest edition of Cybersleuth's Guide to the Internet, which explains how to use the Internet to investigate just about anything — from digging up dirt to impeaching someone's credibility to finding missing people, property records, political party affiliations, unlisted phone numbers, cell phone numbers, and much more. Read it before your adversary does!

About TechnoEditorials

A TechnoEditorial is the vehicle through which we opine and provide tips of interest to managing partners, law firm administrators, and others in the legal profession. TechnoEditorials appear first in TechnoGuide, and later here in TechnoLawyer Blog. TechnoGuide, which is free, also contains exclusive content. You can subscribe here.
